Make noise for Ukraine ua

Make noise for Ukraine ua

On 24 August, Ukraine celebrated its Independence Day. We made noise for democracy and freedom, adding our voices to the chorus of support from around the world. NATO Allies are committed to providing long-term support to Ukraine – for the benefit of our shared security – as agreed by NATO Leaders at the 2024 Washington Summit.

Allies reaffirm pledge to strengthen Ukraine's defences at NATO-Ukraine Council meeting

Participants in the NATO-Ukraine Council meeting

The NATO-Ukraine Council met on 28 August 2024 following recent heavy Russian airstrikes against Ukrainian civilians and infrastructure. Allies strongly condemned Russia's indiscriminate strikes and reaffirmed their commitment to further strengthen Ukraine's defences.

Why air superiority is key for NATO

Russia's war in Ukraine reaffirms that air superiority remains job number one to allow conducting successful air operations. Consequently, NATO and its air forces need to be prepared to achieve air superiority early on in any potential conflict. General James Hecker, Commander of Allied Air Command, explains why air superiority is key for NATO

NATO Through Time podcast – NATO's open door (2004) with former President of Latvia Dr Vaira Vīķe-Freiberga

NATO's open door (2004) with Vaira Vīķe-Freiberga LV | NATO Thr

In this episode, former President of Latvia Dr Vaira Vīķe-Freiberga shares her extraordinary life story – from fleeing Latvia as a child at the end of the Second World War, to building a life in Canada for 50 years, to becoming President of Latvia after the country re-established its independence in 1991. Dr Vīķe-Freiberga reflects on her personal experiences, her country's journey to becoming a NATO member in 2004 (alongside Bulgaria, Estonia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia), and on the future of NATO.

NATO Naval Forces conducted exercise with Japanese Maritime Self-Defense Force and Allies

Three NATO ships conducted a successful passing exercise with two Japanese ships in the Eastern Mediterranean on 14 August 2024. A passing exercise allows Allied and Partner navies to develop and maintain mariner skills and strengthen interoperability. During the operation, the ships conducted a wide range of activities from manoeuvring exercises to communications drills.

Ukraine - voices from the frontline

Ukraine - voices from the frontline

At the 2024 NATO Summit in Washington D.C. in July, Allies renewed their commitment to support Ukraine in the long-term, to help the country defend itself today and deter Russian aggression in the future. Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine continues to devastate the country and cost human lives. In this video, members of the Ukrainian Armed Forces, many of them volunteers, talk from the frontline about what the conditions are like and about why it is so important that Ukraine prevails.

NATO REVIEW - Reinforcing resilience: NATO's role in enhanced security for critical undersea infrastructure

99% of the world's data is transmitted through a global network of subsea cables.
